Did you notice anything?

ALL of the technologies, foods, games, and other objects that you saw in this presentation were invented or discovered by Indigenous peoples in North America.

Indigenous peoples living in different areas innovated to suit their needs and the materials that were available to them.

Going Further

The items that you saw in this presentation are just a few of the Indigenous innovations and inventions that are used today.

Indigenous peoples in North America have contributed many other foods and items to everyday life, including certain words and place names.

Going Further

Finally, it's important to note that this presentation has focused on foods and items that were invented or discovered in North America.

However, Indigenous innovators can be found all over the world, and have contributed many different foods, technologies, practices, and knowledge to life today.
